One-third of Indiana households unprepared for extreme weather events, reveals survey

In recent years, natural disasters such as droughts, floods, and hurricanes have become increasingly frequent, gradually becoming the new norm. A survey of 3,000 respondents to gauge the level of preparedness among households for coping with catastrophic weather conditions. The survey was commissioned by ServiceMaster. For example, do Texans stockpile water in anticipation of droughts, Illinoisans maintain their sump pumps to withstand flooding, and Californians take precautionary measures like cleaning gutters, porches, and decks to mitigate the risks associated with wildfires?Alarmingly, the survey revealed that a significant 31% of households do not take any proactive measures ahead of natural disasters. This lack of preparation is particularly concerning in states like Washington, where only 44% of households reported taking preventive steps, despite the state's vulnerability to several natural disasters due to its diverse geography and climate. Washington is prone to earthquakes, floods, and wildfires, making it essential for residents to be well-prepared. On the other hand, Idaho emerged as the state with the most prepared residents, with 80% of households taking steps to prepare for natural disasters. Idaho's fire season typically extends from late spring through early fall when conditions are dry and hot. Additionally, flooding is a frequent hazard in the state, particularly during the spring when snowmelt from the mountains swells rivers and streams, and flash flooding can occur during heavy rainstorms. When it came to Indiana specifically - a state affected by flooding during the spring and summer months - the survey found that over one-third of households do not take proactive steps to prepare for extreme weather events. Heavy rainfall from thunderstorms, combined with snowmelt in the spring, can lead to flooding in Indiana. Rivers, streams, and low-lying areas are particularly susceptible to flooding, which can cause property damage, road closures, and disruptions to transportation. The survey also shed light on the psychological impact of extreme weather events, with over 1 in 3 (35%) respondents reporting that they suffer from anxiety due to these occurrences. Among households that do not take preventive measures, financial constraints were cited as the primary reason, followed by uncertainty about the necessary supplies or actions to take. Surprisingly, 13% of respondents said that no one had explained to them what they need to do and why. The survey also revealed a significant knowledge gap, with less than half (48%) of participants stating that they fully understand the risks of natural weather events in their area. Furthermore, only 1 in 5 respondents reported having a set plan among household members in case of a natural disaster. Finally, when asked about their household's ability to sustain itself with current emergency supplies after an extreme weather event, 22% said they could only last for a few days, while 36% said they could survive for one week. Only 3% of respondents declared that they could sustain themselves for three weeks. "The results of our survey are a wake-up call for all Americans," said Diana Rodriguez-Zaba, founder of ServiceMaster Restoration by Zaba. "It's alarming to see that so many households are not taking any proactive measures to prepare for natural disasters, despite the increasing frequency and severity of these events. Diligent property maintenance can mean the difference between preservation and loss - in fact, preparedness should not be considered a choice, but a necessity." ServiceMaster Restoration has included some basic tips on how best to prepare for extreme weather events: Floods • Elevate electrical systems, appliances, and install flood vents to reduce damage. • Keep important documents in a waterproof container and create digital copies. • Ensure proper landscaping to direct water away from your home. • Consider investing in sandbags and other flood-defense materials. • Create an evacuation plan that includes a go-bag with essentials and know local flood evacuation routes. Tornadoes • Identify a safe room or storm shelter in your home; if not available, a basement or an interior room on the lowest floor without windows is best. • Keep helmets and heavy shoes in your shelter area to protect against flying debris. • Conduct regular tornado drills with your family so everyone knows where to go and what to do. • Have an emergency kit ready in your shelter area. Wildfires • Create a defensible space around your home by clearing away brush and dead vegetation. • Use fire-resistant materials for roofing and siding if possible. • Prepare a 'wildfire action plan' with evacuation routes and a communication plan. • Have an emergency kit with N95 respirator masks to protect against smoke inhalation. • Keep a hose connected and ready to douse small fires if safe to do so.

Have fun, but make water safety a priority this summer

In the midst of swimming season, Indiana Conservation Officers remind Hoosiers to make safety a priority when recreating around bodies of water. "Even when fun is your main focus, always recognize the danger water poses, even to strong swimmers or experienced boaters," said Capt. Jet Quillen of DNR Law Enforcement. If you are going to be recreating around water, follow these basic safety tips: • Discuss the dangers of water with your family and loved ones before going out. • Wear a lifejacket. • Tell someone where you are going and when you will return. • Go with a buddy. • Do not venture around flooded or fast-moving waterways. • Avoid alcohol. In addition to basic water safety, Indiana Conservation Officers also stress the importance of boating safety and remind boaters to know the rules of the water. Reducing a boat's speed in unfamiliar areas and being aware of unusual water conditions respective to the size and type of boat are not only safety tips, but also important environmental considerations. Regardless of your boat type, doing an initial assessment of water levels and current speed are essential. Designate a sober boat operator. Alcohol causes impaired balance, blurred vision, poor coordination, impaired judgement, and slower reaction time. These impairments can be magnified by wave action, sun exposure, and wind. It is illegal to operate a motorboat or personal watercraft in Indiana while intoxicated due to alcohol or drugs. Indiana law defines intoxication as having a blood alcohol level of 0.08% or greater. A lifejacket should be United States Coast Guard approved, in good working condition, and size appropriate for the wearer. New lifejackets are designed to be lighter, less obtrusive, and more comfortable. Inflatable lifejackets allow mobility and flexibility for activities like boating, fishing, or paddling, and are much cooler in warmer weather. This week in history June 13, 1971

The New York Times began to publish sections of the "Pentagon Papers", a top-secret Department of Defense study of America's involvement in the Vietnam War. The papers indicated that the American government had been lying to the people for years about Vietnam. In 1967, Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara ordered his department to prepare a history of American involvement in Vietnam. McNamara had already begun to harbor doubts about U.S. policy, and the study substantiated that. Top-secret memorandums, reports, and papers indicated that the U.S. government had systematically lied to the American people. The study remained locked away in the Pentagon. In 1971, Daniel Ellsberg, a Defense Department employee, began to smuggle portions of the papers out of the Pentagon. These papers made their way to the New York Times, and on June 13, 1971, the American public read them in stunned amazement. The papers added further fuel to the anti-war movement and drove the administration of President Richard Nixon into a paranoia about information leaks. Nixon attempted to stop further publication of the papers, but the Supreme Court refused to issue an injunction. One of the most dramatic examples were documents indicating that the Kennedy administration had openly encouraged and participated in the overthrow of South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963. www.history.com

Keep wildlife wild, asks Indiana Department of Natural Resources

This is the time of the year when you may start to notice nests and dens occupied by young wildlife around your home. If you do, help keep wildlife wild by remembering the following if you encounter a young animal alone.

Adult animals rarely abandon their young. Parents often leave young unattended for long periods of time to gather food and may only return a few times a day. A nest or den without a parent present does not necessarily mean that the young have been abandoned.

Do not hover to see if a parent has come back to its young. An adult animal will not return if people or pets are close to the nest or den. Give the young space and only check back periodically. If you can't tell if a parent has checked on a nest, place straw or grass over the nest and return later to see if it has been disturbed.

Young wildlife should not be handled. Human scent is unlikely to cause parents to abandon their young; however, handling young wildlife and disturbance of a nest can alert predators to the young animal's presence. Young may also carry disease or parasites they can transfer to people or pets, and are capable of biting or scratching.

For a list of wildlife rehabilitators or more information on orphaned and injured wildlife, visit www.on.IN.gov/keepwildlifewild.

Career scholarship account application now open for Indiana high school students

The State of Indiana is now accepting applications for students to participate in the Career Scholarship Account (CSA) program during the upcoming school year. The first-in-the-nation CSA program provides $5,000 annually for tenth through twelfth grade students enrolled in eligible work-based learning programs, including internships, apprenticeships, applied learning experiences and credential attainment experiences.

"In K-12 education, we have an incredible opportunity to help every student find their purpose, know their value and understand the possibilities for their life's path," said Dr. Katie Jenner, Indiana Secretary of Education. "In order to maximize the four years of high school, we must work together to ensure more students have access to quality experiences that set them up for success, including high-quality work-based learning and educational attainment opportunities. Indiana's CSA program is one way to remove barriers, such as transportation, and ensure more students have the opportunity to experience careers and earn a credential of value while still in high school."

Indiana's CSA program

provides all students the opportunity to explore their interests, gain hands-on experience and build skills that will ensure a seamless transition from high school to higher education and quality careers. CSA funds can be used to cover eligible expenses in the following categories:

- Enrollment fees for courses, sequences, apprenticeships or programs of study;
- Career coaching and navigation services;
- Postsecondary education and training;
- Transportation and equipment; and
- Certification and credentialing examinations.

"Career exploration through work-based learning programs is incredibly valuable to a student's journey to determine their ideal pathway after high school," said Indiana Commissioner for Higher Education Chris Lowery. "As students receive more flexibility to participate in these hands-on experiences, Indiana's CSA Program will remove potential barriers and increase opportunities for students to discover possibilities for education and training beyond high school."

Through a coordinated cross-agency effort, the Indiana Department of Education approves eligible programs, the Indiana Commission for Higher Education approves eligible providers and the Treasurer of State approves eligible students and provider expense reimbursements.

"We are really excited to see how Career Scholarship Accounts will continue to provide great alternative career paths for our students," said Daniel Elliott, Indiana Treasurer of State. "With apprenticeship programs gaining momentum, this is another example of how Indiana is leading the way in offering more options for school choice, ensuring that everyone can find the path that's right for them."

Students at any Indiana high school are encouraged to apply. Applications for the 2024-2025 school year will be accepted through Tuesday, October 1. Visit the student resources page for additional information on the CSA program, eligibility requirements and to access the student application.

Additional details on how funds may be used can be found at www.in.gov/tos

Nominations sought for 20th anniversary of South Shore Legends induction

Nominations are now open for a new South Shore Legend to be added to the Wall of Legends at the Indiana Welcome Center in Hammond. Nominees should have accomplishments that resonate in and beyond northwest Indiana that demonstrate innovation, creativity, courage and/or exploration.

“Recognizing people from Northwest Indiana for their contributions to the region and to greater society is an important part of creating region pride and providing inspiration to future generations,” said Kelly Anoe, Legacy Foundation President & CEO. “We are excited to be a partner in bringing this program back.”

Legends are individuals, living or dead, who have had a substantial impact with lasting implications and have lived or worked in Lake, Porter, La Porte, Jasper, Newton, Pulaski or Starke counties.

“With the support from Legacy Foundation and BP Whiting Refinery, the Indiana Welcome Center completely redesigned the Wall of Legends to an interactive kiosk for the 20th anniversary,” stated Phil Taillon, CEO & President at the South Shore Convention & Visitors Authority. “The rich history of these legends is an inspiration to all of us who live and work in the area.”

South Shore Legends are typically historical contributors, not modern-day innovators. Past Legends include Orville Redenbacher, Charles Bowman & Garnet Findling for revolutionizing the popcorn industry, Frank Borman – Apollo 8 Commander, “A Christmas Story” author Jean Parker Shepherd, and many others.

Nominations will be accepted through July 31, 2024. Multiple individuals engaged in the same activity can be included in one nomination. Direct questions to Stephanie@southshorecva.com. For more information, to view past Legends or to make a nomination visit www.alongthesouthshore.com/legends

Purdue University Northwest to offer Master of Social Work degree

Purdue University Northwest (PNW) will begin recruiting students for its new Master of Social Work (MSW) program that is expected to enroll its first cohort in fall 2025.

PNW’s MSW program will prepare advanced generalist social workers who are well-qualified to meet social services needs in our metropolitan region.

“Engaging individuals as partners in the helping process is key to social work,” said Anne Gregory, dean of the College of Humanities, Education and Social Sciences at PNW. “If you are someone interested in building and strengthening relationships in ways that promote, maintain and enhance the well-being of individuals, families, organizations and our communities, then the PNW MSW program is for you.”

The MSW curriculum will center on anti-oppressive social work practice that advocates for social, racial, economic and environmental justice for all vulnerable populations. After completion of PNW’s MSW degree, graduates will be eligible for social work licensure (LSW).

MSW graduates earn qualifications to begin careers in sectors such as mental health, government, hospitals, schools, deaddiction centers and advocacy agencies.

“Our stellar social work faculty are very excited to offer the MSW program at PNW,” said Shreya Bhandari, professor of Social Work and director of PNW’s MSW program. “We are currently working on gaining initial accreditation with the Council on Social Work Education, the body that accredits social work programs across the nation.”

MSW students at PNW

will be able to leverage synergistic connections between other related graduate programs at the university, including PNW’s Counseling, Couple and Family Therapy, and Psychology programs. PNW has offered a Bachelor of Arts in Social Work program since 2016 that is accredited by the Council on Social Work Education.

To learn more about PNW’s MSW program, visit www.pnw.edu/msw. Applications will be accepted through January 15, 2025. More information about graduate studies at PNW is also available at www.pnw.edu/graduate-studies.

Purdue University Northwest is a premier metropolitan university dedicated to
